

A Comparison of Automated Home Businesses

Automated home businesses are all the rage but are they worth it? And are they reasonable for the average person to get started? Can you really make a good income working at home with these programs? Can you really work from home at all?

One of the most popular automated home businesses is PAS (Prosperity Automated System). It costs anywhere from $2000-$4000 to get started. While you do get a great automated program where sales people call your leads for you, and it doesn't take much time, you don't really learn anything (you just depend on them) and it is hard for most people to come up with the large outlay of cash. PAS also depends on buying expensive ad packs to generate any sales. The bottom line: PAS is good if you have the money to start it, and can keep up with the cost of the ad packs, and you really don't want a home business, you just want to have some money coming in from time to time.

One program that blows PAS out of the water (in my opinion) is Predator. The new Predator Automated Marketing System has a great product. (Does anyone even know what PAS's product is?) They also have professionals call your leads for you, and have a great looking website. The website is state of the art. The cost to get started is either $1500 or $3995 which is a little better than PAS, but the product that you get, the Make Money or Make Excuses training course, which has been marketed by Mentors on a Mission for almost 3 years now, is worth much more than that price. If you want to learn how to be a master marketer – this course is a must. The bottom line: If you have the money go for this one.

What if that sounds great, but you really still don't have the money? Well, you can forget some of the other automated marketing systems too. Coastal Vacations is good, they have a good product (vacations), but again, the cost to get started is high. There are a few others, Liberty League, Emerald Passport, and more, but, most of these are not truly automated. They are expensive to get started, and most do not close your sales for you.

Success Synergy Systems is the newest program among the giants. Started by a member of PAS, it gets you going in both PAS and Coastal Vacations for $175, which is reasonable for most people. You get premier levels in both companies, and you get an income opportunity with SSS as well. The one draw back is that it may not be long before you are in profit, but it will be a little while before you are making enough money to work at home completely. But, it's better to get started on your future than to put it off forever.

And, yes, it is possible to work from home. I have been working at home for 7 years. I like the new automated businesses because I now have a 2 year old and I don't like making sales calls myself anymore. I used to love it, I am really good at it, but, I just don't want to do it now. And most people are in that same position. So, automated home businesses are all the rage for a good reason and they are also here to stay.
