FL, USA:

Over the past decade the internet has grown remarkably along with web sites which make our day to day lives much easier. With YouTube.com selling for millions in 2006 and Google.com and all of the success the web site has had, up comes another big web site that is apparently going to be the next big thing.

Two young entrepreneurs decided to take food into their own hands and show people there were more restaurants and food choices in their area than they would have initially thought.

When I first heard about this I thought to myself "How about that? Show me where I can eat my lunch for the day huh?" and sure enough when I went to the website I found lovely places to dine in my area that I never even knew existed.

The website, <http://www.WheresOurFood.com>, is not just any old web site at all, to my delight it has a feature which has made my day/month/year! It features online ordering allowing me to not even have to use the office phone anymore to obtain my lunch. I tested this the other day with a restaurant in my area and my food was delivered promptly without the hassles I would usually get over the phone.

Upon visiting wheresourfood.com, I have concluded that this may just be the next big thing on the internet. Especially with all of the attention it has received over the past few weeks. It has over 400,000 restaurants in their listings from the United States and Australia - this impressed me alone.

When I reached the young entrepreneurs for comments they said "It was something we planned for so long before we actually took the initiative to make it happen, and just like we thought - people love it. Especially because its so easy to use."
