Jeffrey Sloe has helped his web conferencing system site solidify the top spot on the Google search engine for the keyword web conference room

CLEVELAND — March 26, 2007 — Today during the state of the system meeting, Inetekk, Inc. announced that VereConference, a web conferencing system traffic portal has reached the number one spot on the Google search engine for the keyword phrase, “web conference room”. It took only eleven days, after kicking off a search engine optimization campaign, for VereConference to make it to the top of Google. The campaign is being implemented by a group of web conferencing master distributors, and is still in progress. Jeffrey Sloe is part of the web conferencing master distributors team, which is led by SEO specialist Butch Hamilton. The web conferencing SEO campaign will continue for several weeks in an effort to maintain the #1 position. Jeffrey Sloe and Butch Hamilton both have many sites in the number one position on Google for different keywords. They continue to put forth the effort it takes to get to the top.

“The master distributors have been doing an outstanding job and deserve a round of applause,” said Thomas Prendergast, CEO of Inetekk, Inc.. “The team of master distributors, which is under the watchful eye of Butch Hamilton, have worked extremely hard and have reached the number one spot in Google for the keyword phrase ‘web conference room.’”

Record Rise to the Top

Jeffrey Sloe, a member of Veretekk, a lead generating and SEO system that is owned by Inetekk, Inc., feels that this may be some sort of record. Even though there is no documentation suggesting that, getting to the top of Google in eleven days out of one hundred one million sites, ought to be a record. The web conferencing system site is a public forum for the web conferencing master distributors to use for posting information about the web conferencing system. There are over five hundred forum entries posted as of today, and there were over two hundred of them within an eleven day period. The majority of the posts were about the web conferencing master distributor’s experience with their VereConference web conferencing system.

“The more I use my web conferencing system the more I realize what a must have tool it is,” said Jeffrey Sloe, a user and trainer of the web conferencing system. “I use it to do online training and to help my sales process. I use power point presentations that I just upload to the web conferencing whiteboard. From there I can highlight, point out areas of interest, draw images, and add text, to my heart's content.”
