New York, NY – Michael Moore, in his documentary on healthcare aptly named ‘Sicko’, vividly points out the dismal state of healthcare in America. Comprehensive healthcare legislation and increasing public awareness about healthcare costs and problems will eventually rectify the imbalances in the system. Meanwhile, uninsured and underinsured people are suffering due to lack of access to healthcare. New Medical Horizons ( <http://www.newmedicalhorizons.com/> ) is taking steps to aid the uninsured and underinsured people of America. Our clients, insured or not, will never have to make a choice between a ring finger and a middle finger. We offer superior medical care, at prices as low as 1/8th of that in the United States.

Statement from CEO Rob Zachariah, “It’s a tough battle. We just don’t know if insurance companies will one day change their business model to aid those individuals who are truly in dire need of treatment. However, until then, we can offer options in the area of medical tourism to these individuals in need. People like Josef Woodman, Jeffrey Schult and David Hancock are introducing medical tourism to Americans from all walks of life, and companies like Blue Cross Blue Shield of South Carolina and New Medical Horizons Inc. are part of a nationwide effort to provide low cost and effective healthcare.”

Everyone has a choice. It’s a market based globalized economy. If Aetna and Healthfirst and other HMO’s cannot provide healthcare at affordable prices, people will go to places were it is affordable. Its called medical tourism. The success of Apollo Hospitals Group In India, Bumrungrad in Thailand and Gleneagles in Singapore are shining examples of the potential demand for medical tourism.
