TV Pro Gear, a leading systems integration and mobile solutions provider for the broadcast, production, and post industries, announced the launch of its new website today.

The new website (www.tvprogear.com) is designed to reflect the change in strategic direction for the company. TV Pro Gear is transitioning from a used equipment dealer to a sought-after integrator for broadcast, production, post and mobile solutions. The company also supplies the broadcast and production industry with the revolutionary FLYPAK™, a mobile studio in a box.

The newly redesigned site showcases the capabilities of the company while functioning as a full e-commerce site. The site features extensive product and systems descriptions, current and past projects sections, and customer testimonials. Additionally, the web site provides a platform (forum) for a host of educational tools. Visitors can learn the basics of broadcast, production, and post with tools to help them with their purchasing decisions.

The TV Pro Gear site will also feature online product demonstrations and the opportunity to learn about all the possibilities offered by the company in a multi-media format.

In addition to serving the broadcast, production, and post markets, TV Pro Gear has spread its wings into the worship, education and government markets as well. Their mission is to provide customized solutions to fit any situation or budget.

“We are very excited about our new web site. We feel that it will allow our staff to better serve our clients. The new functionalities will also make the visit to our site much more pleasant and informative” said, Chan Mahon, President of TV Pro Gear.
