Attendees are staying closer to home when attending seminars, finds www.SeminarInformation.com

"We see a trend that more and more seminar attendees are looking for seminars closer to home" reports Mona Piontkowski, EVP of www.SeminarInformation.com. "Maybe it's the hassle of travel, maybe it's the cost of gas, maybe it's a combination of both" states Piontkowski, "But we see more and more registrations made the last minute for seminars nearer to the registrant's place of business."

Seminar sponsors like National Seminars, Skillpath Seminars, Fred Pryor, CareerTrack and Padgett Thompson schedule their seminars in locations all over the US and Canada as compared to sponsors like Cornell University and the American Management Association who prefer to present their seminars in major cities like New York and San Francisco.

The www.SeminarInformation.com website offers users the opportunity to search for training locally as well as for those seminars presented in larger cities. Other search options include by title, topic, sponsor or date. Full outlines of courses are included and registration for seminars is easy by either filing out the online or fax form or calling SeminarInformation.com toll free at 877-SEM-INFO.

###

SeminarInformation.com started in 1981 is the largest database of seminars and conferences on the Internet. As publishers of the SIS WORKBOOK and now creators of www.SeminarInformation.com, SIS has been the leader and respected expert in the field for over 26 years. The website, free to viewers, offers the ability to find a seminar, read the outline and then register immediately online or by fax or phone.
