

Is One of Your New Year's Resolutions is To Get It All Done, Organized and Prioritized?

Maybe SeminarInformation.com, the largest database of seminars on the Internet, can help with a seminar from it's comprehensive listing.

"It seems the more we have technology to make our life easier, the less time we actually have. Getting it all done everyday seems impossible," states Mona Piontkowski, EVP and co-founder of SeminarInformation.com.

"We've just updated our database of seminars and training programs and many of these courses address the problems of organization, time management and just getting it all done," she adds. A few courses that might help solve the problem include:

Essential Time Management & Organization Skills (<http://www.seminarinformation.com/qqbpbd/essential-time-management-and-organization-skills>) by National Seminars

Managing Multiple Projects, Objectives and Deadlines (<http://www.seminarinformation.com/qqayxd/managing-multiple-projects-objectives-and-deadlines>) by SkillPath Seminars.

Managing Multiple Priorities (<http://www.seminarinformation.com/qqabrs/managing-multiple-priorities>) by Fred Pryor Seminars

Getting Things Done® Certification Program: A Path to Personal Productivity (<http://www.seminarinformation.com/qqbtwf/getting-things-done-certification-program-a-path-to>) by Linkage Inc.

Viewers of the free website can find a seminar, read a complete outline, find a perfect date and location and then sign up for the seminar right online, by phone at 877-SEM-INFO or by fax.
