Rodchata Enterprises will be launching its new, all-purpose, ultimate bachata website. No other website provides such features for those that love bachata. From bachata lovers to bachata experts, this is their all-around, bachata website.

Announced several months ago from the popular Rodchata Buzz Newsletter, and designed by JS2 Design, iBachata.com is now ready to storm its way onto the web; the launch date is set for, April 16, 2008.

"We predict that it's going to be a blast with bachata lovers all over the world. iBachata.com is a big project," says Rodchata Enterprises CEO, Rodney Aquino. "We've been spreading the exciting music and dance of bachata for quite some time now, and we wanted to bring that same excitement, dedication, and passion to our fellow bachateros, not just in United States but all over the world. We understand it's a big leap to launch a website for everyone in the Globe, and our goal is to make it a great site, where people can interact, inform, and have an open communication with everyone with no favoritism."

"Designing iBachata.com was unique for us" cited JS2 Design founder and account manager, Jimmy Bui. "We wanted an end product that was visually stunning while easy to navigate. We wanted it to have all the features typical of any community-based website but presented in a way that made sense to the user."

iBachata.com lets you post and advertise your bachata events for free. People can post comments, write articles, link their URLs, post pictures and videos. It's always updated, always constant, and always being added to, with content directly from bachateros that shares that same passion we all have.

"New content will be added constantly, and calendars will be updated everyday by bachateros, Aquino said. "The website will continually be updated with upcoming events, concerts and workshops, for the complete website features that we provide -- you'll always be able to stay on the loop, and you'll always know where to go when you have the bachata itch."

iBachata, will be an all-encompassing source for those bachata hungry on the web.

Beginning with Bachata interviews, from artists to dancers, and every style, the site will feature musicians, dancers, performers and teachers from all over," Aquino said, "but, it's also an amazing place for people who just love the music, or going out dancing – it allows people to have an amazing experience of interaction, that's always growing and current, at their fingertips."
