Festival Kicks Off With the Short's Hollywood Premiere at Egyptian Theatre in Conjunction with the American Cinematheque HollyShorts Film Festival Takes Place August 7-10, 2008 with Weekend Screenings at Laemmle's Sunset 5

The organizers of HollyShorts announced today that the acclaimed short film "X," written and directed by Actor/Director Josh Brolin ("No Country For Old Men," "American Gangster,") will have its Hollywood premiere as the official opening short film at the 4th annual HollyShorts Film Festival, which takes place August 7-10, 2008. Brolin's "X" will premiere during the HollyShorts opening night celebration, which will be held in conjunction with the American Cinematheque at the world renowned Egyptian theatre in Hollywood on Thursday, August 7.

HollyShorts also announced today the festival's weekend screenings (August 9-10) will take place at Laemmle's Sunset 5 theatre in Hollywood . The announcements were made today by festival co-organizers/directors Daniel Sol and Theo Dumont .

"We are delighted to kick off this year's HollyShorts with the Hollywood premiere of Josh Brolin's short film "X" in conjunction with the American Cinematheque," said Sol.

"HollyShorts has grown rapidly and as this year's festival expands to four days, we will highlight the best and brightest short films and music videos from around the world.

This year's event will include can't miss networking forums, receptions and panels with some of the most influential figures in the entertainment industry today. We look forward to presenting a great slate of high quality short form content and continue creating platforms for filmmakers to advance their careers to the next level."

"I'm honored that Hollyshorts has chosen my directorial debut film X to open their 4th annual festival," said Brolin. "I'm proud of the stark nature of this film, how it explores the parent/child relationship and appreciate the support of those willing to embrace my journey into filmmaking. We're excited to show the film and be apart of this event."

"The American Cinematheque has had a long history of supporting the short film format as it is often the launching pad for new voices in cinema. We are pleased to be collaborating with HollyShorts Film Festival to further the exposure of this medium," Andrew P. Crane, American Cinematheque Short Film Programmer.

"X" Synopsis:
