Stephanie Moore, owner of Stephanie Moore Photography, is rapidly becoming one of the region's most prominent and respected photojournalists and portrait artists. The past year has been highly productive and exciting for her, as she has moved from her studio in New York to south of Kansas City. A proud member of WPPI (Wedding and Portrait Photographers International), Stephanie Moore strongly believes in continual learning and in her own development as an artist. She has developed a unique style, her images invoke a trendy, fresh and immediate vigor; the composition and abstract forms intersect in ways that your eyes can't depart from. Much of her work is on display in her studio and on her website.

In a recent essay on her studio, it was written:

I always look for something fresh and new. The "newness" comes, as Stephanie puts it, from being "in the here and right now along with my model." Her process behind her recent work is very simple. It is not about remembering or thinking, but about acting in the moment, being aware and awake to the possibilities of seeing that lie along the perceptual edge -- the boundary of the unknown, a place of endless discoveries. For Stephanie, her portraiture is the portal to this place and provides her drive and passion. "It's not very far out there, you can feel it with the model -- that 'timeless shot' is a just a click away."

Stephanie Moore Photography is also announcing an expansion of services clearly showcased on the completely redesigned website at <http://www.stephaniemooreonline.com> . We also keep up on current photo journalistic news, trends, tips, tricks, and other cutting edge ideas that are posted daily in our blog called SMP Today, so please visit <http://www.smptoday.com> for up to date news on the "latest and greatest" with Stephanie!

###

Stephanie Moore began her professional training in New York in early 2000, and developed into a very respected artist. Her work has been published worldwide partly due to the true photo journalistic she has developed. Now, having expanded into the Midwest Region, with her new studio south of Kansas City, MO., Stephanie Moore Photography invites you to visit her website and studio for a tour of her gallery. Also, call for a free consultation at 660.679.6791.
