

New Car Road Test Reviews from an Experienced View

autoMedia Solutions, Inc./autoMedia.com offers professional reviews of all-new vehicles like the 2009 Nissan Murano crossover SUV. What is the professional touch the website brings to its online magazine?

April 22, 2008 - PRLog -- The all-new, second-generation 2009 Nissan Murano defies convention with its refined speed-sensitive steering, quiet continuously variable transmission (CVT), and “curvaceous modern art” styling. The 2009 Nissan Murano also received top performer honors in the latest crash tests conducted by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety (IIHS).

This is what autoMedia.com informs its web readers of as it reviews the new 2009 Nissan Murano on its website—founded in 2000 with the intent of bringing accuracy, prestige, and veteran-journalist experience to a web magazine. Since the creators of the website were professional automotive editors, designers and writers, accuracy and experience is key in the e-magazine’s many practical features such as professional road test reviews, daily automotive news, car listing services, do-it-yourself articles, performance upgrades and safety features.

The website now has over 1,500 articles on a variety of automotive issues, including reviews of top new crossover models like the 2009 Nissan Murano and various technical articles. For midsize sport-utility shoppers interested in the 2009 Nissan Murano and other new vehicles, or for drivers/owners hoping to learn something about vehicle maintenance, autoMedia.com’s expert-testimony website is worth looking into.

About autoMedia.com: The autoMedia Solutions website, www.autoMedia.com was founded by a team of automotive journalists with the intent of being the premier source of accurate web information on the automotive industry and its products. It is written in the tradition of Motor Trend and Hot Rod magazines and has been supported by automotive icons Robert E. Petersen and Carroll Shelby.
