Dated: Apr 29, 2008

Integrity Way Transitional Housing has launched a new recovery blog in hopes of creating a safe place to discuss recovery related issues online. The blog is designed to help people express themselves without having to break their anonymity.

There is a new recovery focused blog designed to give people the freedom to express themselves, build support networks and find other recovery related resources.

Integrity Way Transitional Housing has just launched a new blog that allows visitors to post comments and remain completely anonymous. "Reason for the blog is a simple one, we understand that picking up the phone to ask for help can be very difficult and Integrity Way wants to reach as many sick and suffering addicts and alcoholics as possible," says Integrity Way's VP of Marketing. People who post comments many times will receive feedback from others trying to help. Mr. Brindisi says "it's a great way to build a support network online."

Integrity Way Transitional Housing has not only launched the new blog but has also added many useful links for people should they need additional help such as finding detoxification centers, residential treatment centers, or additional recovery related resources.

Integrity Way encourages people seeking help to visit <http://www.integritywayflorida.com/blog/> and post anonymous comments about themselves, how much time clean and sober they have and how they are remaining sober. Integrity Way Transitional Housing is a coed fourteen home, seventy four bed recovery communitu with two locations in Delray Beach, Florida. For more information please visit them on the web at <http://www.integritywayflorida.com/>
