WASHINGTON - A new government report released recently shows that the Upper Midwest region of the United States has the highest DUI rates in the country. Conversely, several southern states demonstrated remarkably low levels of DUI.

The new report, based on information obtained through the National Survey on Drug Use and Health, covers responses from over 127,000 adults. According to the survey, conducted over three years from 2004-2006, nearly 15% of all adult drivers in America admit to DUI in the previous year. More numbers on DUI are available at Rhode Island DUI lawyer James Powderly's website <http://www.rhodeislandduidefenselawyer.com>

Alcohol related DUI was highest in Wisconsin, followed by North Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska and South Dakota.

Drug-related DUI rates were highest in Washington, D.C, Rhode Island, and Massachusetts.
