

Beauty Lurks in Liquid Residue - Twelve New Fluidism Images Prove It

By Fluidism Concepts

Dated: May 05, 2008

USA, North Carolina artist Robert Kernodle reveals twelve new images in his art-as-fluid portfolio.

USA, North Carolina artist Robert Kernodle has listed twelve new fluidism images, available as strictly limited, canvas artworks or as illustrations for licensing. These are images that he describes as fluid flow art, fluid dynamic art, or fluid dynamic photography. He combines camera and paint to capture short-lived liquid patterns in compositions that disappear, once the paint dries or disperses.

"Previous images", Kernodle says, "focused on fluid as art in small pools or liquid films. This new group of images focuses on liquid residue remaining on container walls, after I pour out the main pool."

Kernodle displays his images at the talentedatabase.com website. Direct link is:
