Office Cleaning Business Owner Brent Wale Teaches New Entrepreneurs How to Duplicate His Success in the Office Cleaning Business.

July 6, 2008 - PRLog -- Today the economy is tight and unstable, leaving many people looking for ways to make extra money. There are many questionable opportunities out there; however, Brent Wale is now offering his e-course on how to duplicate his success in the office cleaning business to help people find a way to make extra money.

With the economy so tight these days, many people are looking for ways that they can earn some money in their spare time. Of course there are many opportunities out there, but many cost a lot to get started and don't allow people to start earning money right away. Well, Brent Wale was a college student when he learned how he could earn extra money, and now he is teaching new entrepreneurs how to duplicate his success in the office cleaning business by offering a mini e-course that comes in five parts, and it's totally free.

While Brent Wale was in college he was working as a janitor and began to feel that he was worth far more than he was being paid, so he decided to work to get his own office cleaning business. He spent some time working to find out how to start up his own business, and once he found a great system, he quickly started landing cleaning accounts. Currently he is making more than five figures each month, and he is willing to share the steps behind his success with others.

In Brent's Five Part E-course, he teaches people how they can get started in the office cleaning business and be successful, even if they have very little money to get started. Readers will also learn how they can work only a few hours and still make great profits, how they can hire others, instead of doing the cleaning themselves, and make a great income. Brent's teachings do have a lot to offer people looking for ways to expand their income during this time of economic stability.

To learn more about how you can be successful in the office cleaning business and to receive your mini e-course offered by Brent Wale, you can visit www.officecleaningsuccess.com for more information.
