Challenge 300: An Innovative Way for City Leaders to Reduce Poverty and Help Residents Improve Their Lives

COLUMBUS, OH – July 10, 2008 – How different would your city look if 300 of its impoverished and debt-riddled citizens drastically improved their financial lives? How many resources would be saved? How much crime could be prevented?

David Bean, a nationally renowned debt relief crusader, is taking on a new challenge: your city. Through his innovative program, “God’s Debt Elimination Challenge 300,” he’s determined to help the poorest citizens turn their lives around—beginning with the financial burdens that are weighing them down.

With the help of city and church leaders, David plans to select 300 people from cities around the country and teach them a new way to eliminate their debt, rebuild their credit, and begin to develop a solid financial foundation. “In 180 days, there will be a big change in the participants’ thinking and in their lifestyles,” vows David Bean, founder of Success Builders, Inc. (www.davidbean7.com). “They will eliminate a portion of their debt and get a big boost in their credit score while in the program.”

And the best part? Participation is free!

Here’s how it works: Participants will have access to a dedicated web site—or materials mailed directly to their homes—with step-by-step instructions. Once one section is completed, they move on to the next section, improving their finances as they go. And David is available at every turn to help answer questions and make sure they stay on the path to financial freedom.

David, a devout Christian, is especially interested in helping the city’s poorest citizens and those currently incarcerated for minor offenses, believing that reaching this population can have the greatest impact upon a community. “Inmates will eventually get out but have nothing to help them stay out—especially because we’re in a recession. This is a preventive measure.”

The goal of Challenge 300 is simple, he says. “When they’ve completed the 180 days, I want participants to have money in the bank, better credit, and a real budget. Most of all, I want them to be debt-proof so they’ll never slip back into poverty again.”
