

Cover yourself if attending Beijing Olympics

By D Tompkins

Dated: Aug 01, 2008

If attending Beijing Olympics on August 8th, make sure that you have travel insurance policy. Travel Insurance China.com offers a wide variety of travel insurance policies to cover your medical and trip costs.

The Beijing Olympics are starting next week, so make sure that you have adequate travel insurance to cover your emergency medical expenses while traveling to China. The web site Travel Insurance China.com is located at:

David Tompkins, owner of this web site noted that "the weather will be hot, the air may be bad and you may just get a bit of food poisoning from that street side vendor, so make sure that you have adequate travel medical insurance to cover your emergency medical expenses."

Getting sick during or after the Beijing Olympics can be very expensive and you will also want an international travel insurance plan that offer evacuation in the event you are not able to return home because of a serious illness or injury. Having trip cancellation and interruption insurance in case you can't make the Olympics is also a key insurance decision when you book your non-refundable airline tickets and tours.

David Tompkins also noted that "We hope that the Olympics will help give our web site added exposure as there is a very large untapped travel insurance market in China and also for visitors to China. We are well positioned to service this vital need for short and long term travel to and from China. We also offer international health insurance plans and group expat plans for multinational companies operating in China."
