Dated: Sep 22, 2008

USA, North Carolina artist Robert Kernodle finally completes eight artworks he abandoned in 2004, which feature organic designs teeming with spontaneous color blends, curious shapes and natural liquid rhythms.

USA, North Carolina artist Robert Kernodle has reawakened some fascinating artworks that he abandoned in 2004 which highlight natural fluid patterns. These artworks are one-of-a-kind originals that feature organic designs teeming with spontaneous color blends, curious natural shapes and pleasing liquid rhythms. They combine improvisation and calculation in Kernodle's signature style called "fluidism". After putting aside these works in 2004, Kernodle finished them recently this year (2008). Pictures appear at the following link:

Since only one of each work exists, a corresponding serial number appears on back to identify the particular artwork uniquely, along with the artist's signature. All these artworks are founded on Kernodle's creative vision (also known as "fluidism"), described by Kernodle at the PHILOSOPHY link at his website:
