

Cockapoo Puppies Are In Demand

By American Cockapoo Club

Dated: Sep 27, 2008

Cockapoos remain a popular breed of dog during the current financial crisis. Requests for puppies have remained strong according to many Cockapoo breeders.

Cockapoo breeders who are members of the American Cockapoo Club are reporting that requests for puppies have remained steady these past few weeks while the nation has experienced problems with gas shortages and financial institution failures.

"Cockapoos are known to be gentle dogs and great with kids," according to Dave Zarro of the American Cockapoo Club. Families who are willing to make the investment in time and money to care for a quality pet realize that the true value goes beyond the price of the dog.

A Cockapoo is a cross between a Cocker Spaniel and a Poodle. The breeders who are members of the American Cockapoo Club recognize the traits and characteristics of each puppy and can help a puppy buyer make a good choice.

Some of the things to look for are the color of the puppy, the type of coat, and the amount of shedding you can expect.
