

Sober Living House in Delray Beach strives for excellence

By Integrity Way

Dated: Oct 09, 2008

Integrity Way continually moves forward with it's staff to assist newcomers in recovery from drugs and alcohol to offer support and structure in their first year of recovery.

While they aren't the only halfway house in Delray Beach, Integrity Way certainly sets standards that others are looking at. By continually adding quality staff members to their mix of structure for their residents, this sober living community has become one of the leading recovery homes in the area.

Many people know Delray as the recovery capital of the world because of it's unique dynamic that encompasses 12 step fellowship, jobs, and meetings. In addition to the recovery programs offered in this south Florida beach town, there are many activities for people to partake in during their first year of recovery.

Integrity Way offers a 'cut above the rest' mentality when it comes to sober housing. By offering items such as free wifi along with other similar items, they are constantly making sure that these people are given the respect that they deserve. "A halfway house doesn't mean that you have to be humiliated" says Matt Brindisi, CEO of Integrity Way. "We can offer these people the respect and dignity they are seeking while transitioning out of treatment programs back in to the real world - and they don't have to be treated improperly."
