Top tourist travel guide website for the Greek islands Greek Island Postcards has struck a deal with premier cheap flight finder Skyscanner to offer site visitors a way to find and book cheap flights to the Greek islands.

The top tourist travel guide website for the Greek islands Greek Island Postcards has struck a deal with premier cheap flight finder Skyscanner.

Visitors to the travel guide site can now use Skyscanner's latest WhoFLies widget to book cheap holiday flights to the Greek islands.

The destination airport is built into the page widget so that visitors to say Corfu, Crete, Kefalonia, Kos, Samos or Rhodes can quickly find which airlines fly to the island, on which days and at the lowest prices.

Mike Mason of Greek Island Postcards said: "This gives real added value to my site visitors. No longer do they have to trawl online through airline websites in order to find the best deals. Skyscanner allows them to set the outgoing airport of their choice from virtually any airport in Europe. They can even choose the language and currency they want. It's very easy to use and makes finding a cheap holiday flight a real breeze."

Mike is so confident of its value he is even installing the Skyscanner widget on islands that have no airport! He explained: "Visitors can fly to an airport on a neighbouring island and catch a ferry so it is not such a daft idea."

Greek Island Postcards is currently the authority site for the Greek islands on major search engines, including Google. With more than 4.3 million page hits so far this year the added attraction of booking cheap holiday flights to the Greek islands should mean even more visitors in 2009.
