

Worldwide Biz: “HCS Worldwide” View Mining Stocks as Strong Buy.

By worldwider

Dated: Oct 30, 2008

“HCS Worldwide” – Battered mining stocks are ripe for investment.

“HCS Worldwide” insiders continue to opine that the case for acquisition of stock in junior mining companies is stronger than ever following broad-based sell-offs in sympathy with base and precious metals and the recent forced-selling by institutions needing to raise cash to cover losses elsewhere in global markets.

“HCS Worldwide” are thought to believe that junior mining stocks represent a once-in-a-generation opportunity to buy into a sector that has hitherto failed to reproduce the fortunes of base and precious metals.

“HCS Worldwide” believe that as the global financial crisis further erodes confidence in the banking system and the perceived safety of government treasuries, commodities will benefit with a knock-on effect on companies producing them.

Commentators suggest that “HCS Worldwide” analysts may be focusing on miners with operations in the continental USA.
