MIDVALE, Utah—An ancient natural remedy produced by Utah-based Sibü is receiving new attention as a drinkable beauty supplement.

Sibü is using extract from Seabuckthorn berries to become an international leader in the emerging field of nutricosmetics. The berries are a super fruit harvested by hand in the Himalayan Mountains and scientific studies have identified more than 190 nutrients in the berries.

Popular in Asia and Europe, nutricosmetics rely on antioxidant dietary supplements to promote healthier skin, hair and nails. In some cases, these natural remedies are being viewed as an alternative to surgical intervention by women who want to retain their health and beauty into later stages of life.

In addition, the Sibü product contains Omega oils 3 - 6 - 7 and 9—rarely found in fruit. Omegas promote cardiovascular health, improve skin and hair quality, and even aid in weight loss.

Ancient Greeks and Tibetans used seabuckthorn to treat skin injuries and to heal skin diseases. More than 130 modern studies have shown that seabuckthorn extract provides benefits in treating liver and gastrointestinal diseases, skin ulcers, cardiovascular disease, and even in improving healing in cancer radiation patients.

Sibü Balance is juice that contains the seabuckthorn extract. It is sold on-line, through distributors and in select retail stores. For more information on Sibü products, visit the website at www.sibu.com or call (800) 710-SIBU.
