EIC Solutions has launched a new DVR Cooler.

WARMINSTER, PA (November 26, 2008) – EIC Solutions, a leading manufacturer of electronic enclosures and thermoelectric air conditioners, has launched a new DVR Cooler. This air conditioned enclosure is designed to house and protect a Digital Video Recorder (DVR), as well as other 19" rack-mount electronics such as servers, routers, modems, switches, amplifiers, network gear, communication equipment and more.

The DVR Cooler is suitable for indoor OR outdoor applications and is built to NEMA 4 or 4X construction standards in steel and stainless steel. Enclosure includes a durable white powder coat finish with other colors available. Equipped with a companion cooling system, the integrated assembly will provide a complete level of protection for your electronics.

EIC's air conditioned DVR Cooler is available in two standard sizes as well as a variety of custom sizes. The 19" rack-mount DVR (not included) remains fully protected from harsh environmental elements including dust, dirt, sand, moisture and extreme temperatures. The enclosure also provides protection against vandalism and theft. The unit is customizable to accommodate different mounting requirements.

With the capability to house more than one rack-mount device, this new air conditioned enclosure will be an excellent solution to various applications in the Security Industry.

“Our new DVR Cooler line provides a security solution for many applications in office buildings, campus locations, governmental facilities, shopping malls, banks and toll booths, just to name a few” said Bruce Blackway, Sales Manager at EIC Solutions. “This new air conditioned enclosure line is a testament to EIC’s commitment to maintaining it’s position as the leader in electronics protection technology. We will continue to serve our customers by providing the highest quality and most innovative products on the market.”

The DVR enclosure line is set for release on December 1, 2008. Orders can be placed directly with EIC Solutions.
