Millions uninsured who can't afford dentistry seek for free or affordable dental care opportunities. Online magazine regularly informs about ways of free and affordable dental care available.

Recent surveys show that average person cannot afford to pay thousands of dollars for necessary dental treatment and about a third of Americans do not have dental insurance, so they may never begin dental treatment. Only free dental clinics may save them from bad dental health.

Happily there are dental clinics and dentist in the US that donate free dental care to those who can't afford it.

"It's great that some of dentist and clinics grant free dental care to uninsured kids and adults, but it isn't enough," says Cristina Afino, editor of WorldDental.org Dental Health Magazine. "We are always featuring free and affordable dental care events scheduled and happened anywhere in US and even abroad. Many readers write to us asking to inform about free dental care available in their area and we try to do that," says Cristina.

Some of dental clinics provide annual free dental care for one day usually before Christmas, but only some hundreds "lucky bargees" are treated these days. Another problem is that many people who can't afford expensive dental treatment get know about free dental care opportunities after they was already happened. Though there is no deficit in persons interested in free dental care many needy stay uninformed.

"There are many ways to affordable dental care", explains Cristina, "many people even do not realize, that dentist living next door can offer a free dental care today, that dentistry school or college near you can offer services at a discount, and even that you can save more than 50% flying abroad for dental care."

WorldDental.org set a goal: to inform readers about as many ways of affordable dental care as possible.

"We are happy that tens of thousands people per month visiting our magazine have opportunity to learn more about affordable dental care and get healthy teeth," says Cristina, "We also ask dentists, dental clinics and schools offering free dental care to send us press releases or information to publish it for free in our news section."

Maybe these efforts of attracting attention to the problem of expensive dental care will make our dental care more affordable for millions?
