Award winning, guerilla filmmaker, G.R. Claveria, is in the midst of wrapping up his production, MISSING AUDREY, the story of a father's obsession to find himself and his missing three year old daughter.

Currently in the final stages of production and due to hit the film festival circuit in Spring 2009. This ambitious indie film stars G.R. Claveria, Teresa Noreen, Gianni Capaldi, Neelam Sahota, and American Idol finalist, Brandon Rogers. A plethora of talent lends to the supporting cast, which includes internet model sensation, Kaila Yu, Miss USA's Miss Washington 2006, Tiffany Doorn, and Colby Kline, daughter of Richard Kline from popular television show Three's Company.

"Guerilla filmmaking is all I know!" states Claveria, who is also the film's producer and two-time National Telly Award winner. "I've never had a big budget so I always had to rely on being resourceful. For MISSING AUDREY, I had a hand in everything, from writing and directing to editing. I'm even the caterer! So my hands are in constant state of motion."

Claveria admits, however, that even he can't do it all on his own. "I'm blessed to know a lot of great, talented people. I've had so much help from my family, friends, and students." Claveria juggles being a father of four, full-time college teacher, and film festival director of the Montana Independent Film Festival and Mockfest of Hollywood. Of the film, MISSING AUDREY, Claveria states, "All my stories are personal, with a drop of poetic license. If you watch my films closely you'll catch little glimpses of my life philosophies."

MISSING AUDREY follows Edward, a medical school drop out, who is obsessed with getting his broken family back together. After a weekend with his daughter, Audrey (Araya Sunshine Claveria), the little girl mysteriously goes missing. Edward tries to buy time with his ex, Sylvia (Teresa Noreen), so he can unravel the mystery of what happened to Audrey.
