December product reviews from The Vodka Emporium, featuring Camitz Sparkling Vodka and Hangar One Vodka.

The Vodka Emporium product reviews:

Camitz Vodka

It's not often that something completely new comes to the world of vodka, but we introduce to you Camitz Vodka – the first ever sparkling vodka!

Camitz Sparkling Vodka elegantly balances a natural acidity with a light sweet finish, which is then amplified by delicate sparkling bubbles that underline the outstanding character of this super premium Vodka.

Our bottle has the first patented natural cork for a distilled spirit, allowing it to open with a “pop”. The perfect serving temperature for Camitz Sparkling Vodka is a crisp +4°C/40°F, having been preferably refrigerated and then chilled on ice before serving. The bottle should be stored upright and should not be put in the freezer.

Once opened, a bottle of Camitz Sparkling Vodka can stay sparkling for up to 8 hours, depending on the temperature. If the bottle has not been finished after the cork has been popped, it can be saved by using a “Champagne Stopper”, which will keep the Vodka sparkling for up to 3 days (or even longer depending on how much is left and if stored in a properly chilled environment).

Hangar One Vodka

Hangar One is a new range of Vodka's from the USA.

Produced in an old aircraft hangar at the Alameda Air Station, the makers of Hangar One ambitiously set about producing a Vodka to compete with the likes of Belvedere and Grey Goose.

They've done a great job too. It's just six years since the Vodka was first launched Hangar One has grown massively from tiny batches sold locally to now become one of this years most fashionable spirits.

Hangar One now comes in five variations, from the original Hangar One Straight, to the wonderfully named Citron “Budha's Hand”, Fraser River Raspberry, Kaffir Lime and Madarin Blossom.
