Vertebroplasty is a spine treatment procedure where bone cement is injected into a fractured spine vertebra to stabilize it. The procedure of vertebroplasty is typically used for a spine fracture caused by osteoporosis, a disease that causes weakening of the bones and can lead to fractures in the spine vertebra. An osteoporotic spine fracture can become the cause of extreme back pain along with other symptoms, such as decreased height and spinal deformity or a hunchback appearance. The primary aim of vertebroplasty is to reduce pain caused by spine fractures by stabilizing the bone. Vertebroplasty is typically performed by a spine surgeon or interventional radiologist. It is a minimally invasive procedure and patients usually go home the same day after the completion of the procedure. Vertebroplasty can even be performed with local anesthetic only for patients with severe lung disease who cannot tolerate sedatives well. The procedure of vertebroplasty involves insertion of a balloon into a collapsed or fractured spine vertebra, followed by injection of bone cement to stabilize the fracture, the procedure is more commonly performed in a hospital setting. Vertebroplasty is typically effective, reducing spine vertebral in 90% medical cases.
