Animal Communicator Maureen Harmonay of Animal Translations is launching a new barn visits program, bringing onsite "Animal Communication for Horses" consultations to stables throughout New England.

As part of her new onsite "Animal Communication for Horses" program, Maureen Harmonay of Animal Translations will travel to stables within a 90-minute driving radius of Sterling, Massachusetts for one-hour consultations with individual horses. Thirty minutes of each session will be devoted to telepathic communication with the horse, and another half-hour will be spent with the human client for followup discussion. A transcript of the session will be provided within seven days after the visit.

"Telepathy is a horse's natural language," explains Ms. Harmonay. "Horses are capable of transmitting vivid images of their preferences and life experiences, and of communicating their innermost thoughts and feelings about their people, their stablemates, their surroundings, their training routines, and even, their aspirations. It's not necessary for me to be in a horse's presence in order to communicate with him, but many people seem to prefer this type of in-person experience, so I am very pleased to be able to offer this new service."

Maureen Harmonay's work as a professional Animal Communicator <http://www.AnimalTranslations.com> is firmly grounded in real-life details, and she is often able to supply concrete answers to puzzling situations that have not been able to be resolved via conventional methods. Because telepathy is not bound by time or space, Maureen conducts most of her consultations "remotely," without ever having met the animal with whom she is communicating. But in response to requests from local equestrians, she is expanding her services to include stable visits, requesting a minimum two-horse commitment to make the trip.

Clients who are interested in booking onsite stable consultations will receive a questionnaire to complete before the visit, with an opportunity to list questions and concerns that they would like Maureen to address with their horses.

Maureen charges $75.00 for an onsite consultation, or $65.00 for a remote session. As part of her commitment to the cause of protecting off-the-track thoroughbreds from slaughter, Maureen is donating a percentage of her fees from onsite visits to The New England Thoroughbred Retirement Center <http://www.retiredthoroughbreds.org/Home.html> in Deerfield, New Hampshire.
