Dated: Apr 07, 2009

Rebel Ferguson has the perfect life: a beautiful home in the country, friends that support her, a menagerie of animals, and her parents who love her. But everything changes the day her mother runs away.

Twilight Times Books

What's a girl to do when her mother runs away with the drummer in a rock band, her friendly relationship with the cousins on the neighboring ranch starts to change, and a handsome college guy with a bad reputation takes an interest in her? Sixteen-year-old Rebel Ferguson faces these challenges with courage and humor and decides to do three things:

1. Bring her mother home where she belongs.
2. Show her neighbors, Will and Sully Garret, she's not interested in a serious relationship with either of them.
3. Prove to the Garrets that Rick, the cute college guy, is a gentleman.

Nothing turns out the way Rebel plans, however, and she discovers that people are not always what they seem, and she's a lousy judge of character. If only humans were as trustworthy and dependable as her puppies, cat, and horses. Can she forgive everyone who has disappointed her?
