Traders' Library announces the release of What to Buy and When to Sell: Technical Strategies for Selecting High Performance Stocks, a new DVD trading course from Charles Kirkpatrick, the only two-time winner of the Market Technician Association's prestigious Charles H. Dow award and the recent recipient of the MTA's highest honor, the Annual Award for "outstanding contributions to the field of technical analysis." In a rare 90-minute presentation, Kirkpatrick discusses his thoughts on technical analysis versus finance theory, including why prices are not random – and Traders' Library has made this presentation available to traders everywhere with this brand new DVD.

As traders and the general public struggle through the stresses of the toughest economy since the Great Depression, the need for market education is increasingly apparent. Kirkpatrick offers incredible insights for handling the volatile swings of today's markets. He shows traders how to use relative price strength analysis to maximize short-term growth; these are the same techniques he uses himself to outperform the S&P 500 by nearly 800%. He shares his exact formula that uses relative price strength, relative earnings growth, relative price-to-sales ratio, and chart patterns to react to triggers, rather than predict the market. He also tells you which of these is the strongest indicator. In addition, Kirkpatrick will demonstrate how to repeatedly identify the best buy and sell triggers to maximize portfolios, and much more.

In his organized, concise manner, Kirkpatrick presents the fundamentals that every savvy technical trader should consider. He will show you evidence that goes back over 25 years in real time, not in optimized past data, and has a recorded history of pin-pointing the best stocks and the best trades. Traders will learn how to use these methods to optimize profits in their own portfolios in both advancing and declining markets. This DVD presentation is an incredible opportunity to learn from one of the best technical minds in the business.

Charles Kirkpatrick is president of Kirkpatrick & Company, Inc., which advises leading investing institutions on equities, bonds, currencies, commodities, and the economy. He is co-author of Technical Analysis: The Complete Resource for Financial Market Technicians, now the required text for the MTA's technical analyst certification program. Charles Kirkpatrick is also the author of the new book, Beat the Market: Invest by Knowing What Stocks to Buy and What Stocks to Sell.

Charles Kirkpatrick's What to Buy and When to Sell: Technical Strategies for Selecting High Performance Stocks, among other trading and financial material, is available at www.TradersLibrary.com.
