

American Healthcare Career Institute Offers Free Medical Coding Course

By American Healthcare Career Institute

Dated: May 04, 2009

American Healthcare Career Institute (AHCI) offers free coding course to assist those with financial need and limited experience with online learning.

American Healthcare Career Institute (AHCI) responds to the particularly vast shortage and critical demand for medical coding specialists by offering a free online medical coding course. Starting pay averages about $40,000 yearly. This profession is rapidly becoming a very important gateway to other health care careers.

With the billions of dollars in losses due to inaccurate coding and billing procedures and increased participation of government in health insurance issues, this is the allied health career of choice. American Healthcare Career Institute is assisting people who may have limited online learning experience with an opportunity to get started at no cost or obligation.

American Healthcare Career Institute is developing other free career courses such as nursing, pharmacy, and physical therapy, to assist those with financial need and limited experience.

The free medical coding course offered online by AHCI is a college-level course with a regular enrollment fee of $250 (this is a complete course, not a demo).
