Dated: May 26, 2009

Creative City News is a free monthly electronic newsletter that provides news from the Creative City Network's member municipalities as well as information on current events and activities in communities across Canada and abroad.

Vancouver – The Creative City Network of Canada (CCNC) has just released its 100th issue of the Creative City News e-Newsletter today. Creative City News is a free monthly electronic newsletter that provides news from the Creative City Network's member municipalities as well as information on current events and activities in communities across Canada and abroad.

If you would like to receive Creative City News by email, please visit CREATIVECITY.CA to sign up. If you prefer, you can view archived newsletters online as well. Creative City News is also available in French.

Our popular Creative City News Special Edition Newsletters move beyond our monthly electronic bulletin to cover pressing issues in the field of arts, culture, and community development. Each issue covers a broad theme and focuses in on the latest research and developments.

Past themes have been: "Creating Economic and Social Benefits for Communities", "Nurturing Culture and Creativity to Build Community", as well as "Exploring the Cultural Dimensions of Sustainability". Our most recent issue focuses on Cultural Infrastructure as an "Integral Component of Canadian Communities". Many of our members use these newsletters as valuable resources in making the case for culture with decision-makers and elected officials. Visit our website to view these newsletters or order hard copies.

The Creative City Network of Canada provides professional development and research for cultural development administrators. Its members directly serve over 16 million Canadians in the delivery of cultural planning and programming at the local level.
