Fred Publishing Group recently concluded an independent research on how best to help computer beginners to learn how to use computers faster. What they found in their report will surely help every computer beginner in learning basic computer skills.

So many people in our society today still don't know how to use computers. A company called Fred Publishing Group recently carried out an independent research and has now published their report, to find out why so many computer beginners are still finding it hard to learn and master simple basic computer knowledge skills faster.

During the course of their research, they interviewed many computer beginners on why they still can't learn basic computer skills including the methods they've been using, in order to determine the best way to help anyone that is interested in learning computer basic skills faster.

Here's what Frank Wilson from Texas interviewed has to say about his experience in learning his computer basics:

"It took me months just to learn to use my computer. I wasted months in learning simple computer knowledge skills on my own, due to the fact that I don't have too much time on my own to attend computer training classes. I solely relied on computer training books for my studies. All these while, I've always been scared to tell people that I still don't know how to operate computers properly. I've always feel intimidated when it comes to using computers"

And here's what Jessica Brown from London has to say concerning her experience in learning about computer basic knowledge skills:

"Although I still can't proud myself as a 'computer wizard' yet, but am better off today with my computer knowledge. I've been trying my best to learn computer skills from home on my own, but little did I know that relying only on using computer training books will turn out to be a complete waste of my time and money. All that changed when a friend introduced me to a particular beginner's computer training video tutorial series that helped me in learning how to use my computer better than before.

I literarily mastered all my basic computer skills knowledge within a matter of days. If I had known this all along, I wouldn't have been wasting my precious time and hard earned money in buying all those so called computer beginner training books out there. Using video tutorials for my studies really helped me in learning more about computers faster"
