The Nokia 6303 Classic Silver has a style which is unashamed. Its stylish design is reminiscent of a bygone era when phones had more substance and less features.

The Nokia 6303 Classic Silver has a style which is unashamed. Its stylish design is reminiscent of a bygone era when phones had more substance and less features. However, that is not to say that this phone is lacking features because that would be incorrect, it's packed full of useful functions and is a phone worth considering in the current market.

The 3.15 megapixel camera has auto focus and an LED flash to help in taking good quality images. The resolution of the camera is 2048 x 1536 pixels and is sufficient to provide excellent snap shot capabilities. Video recording is offered at 15 frames per second at VGA quality and offers alternative means of capturing that special moment for posterity.

The 2.2 inch TFT screen is impressive and displays 16 million colours to offer true colour reproduction. The resolution of the screen is 240 x 320 pixels which ensure the screen appears vibrant and expressive in nature. The phone offers a variety of alert types including vibration and ring, and utilises downloadable ringtones as well as MP3 ringtones. The phone provides GPRS and EDGE both of which are class 32. Blue tooth and microUSB offer additional connectivity allowing the transfer of files and synchronisation.

An MP3 player which supports MP3, AAC and eAAC is built in and afford its user with the option of listening to downloaded music. Alternatively the stereo Fm radio which comes with RDS is also available. This means that the user has a choice of musical interludes whether it's local or national radio station or their own downloaded music. The phone provides 64 Mb of memory storage with the option to expand this to an impressive 4 Gb by using the available microSD slot which is Transflash compliant. With additional extras such as the built in flash lite 3, Nokia maps and a handy voice memo facility, for when a pen and paper cannot be used.

The Nokia 6303 Classic Silver is a phone which offers a simple and affordable option for those looking for feature and form within a mobile phone. The term classic within the title harps back to the days when the phone was simply an instrument to receive and make phone calls. In today's market, so many phones have the latest technology but this increases costs, this phone alleviates the need for expensive handsets and offers a viable alternative worth looking at.
