The Sitecom Wireless and Wired Internet Security Cameras fitted with motion detectors are ideal for remote monitoring of various spaces at home or the office

Dubai, United Arab Emirates: Al Otaiba Communications, one of the leading telecom and technology product distributors in the Middle East and the exclusive distributor for Sitecom in the region, has launched a new wired and wireless Internet Security Camera for an optimal surveillance of the house (living room, entrance or baby's bedroom), the office or any other space, such as a garage or a warehouse. Both models make it possible to control and watch the live recordings from any desktop PC or notebook via the Internet or Intranet. In order to ensure maximum security of the home or office the cameras are equipped with a motion detector. Once the activity is spotted, the camera automatically records the movement and the user receives an instant notification via email.

The only thing the user needs is a web browser and an IP address for an easy access. The indoor Internet Security Cameras are ideal for users who pay special attention to the protection of their valuables and want to keep their property safe and secure.

By connecting the WL-404 to a wireless/wired network or the LN-406 to a wired network the user can monitor the area into detail thanks to the 4x zoom, which can be easily adjusted in the interface of the camera.

The Sitecom Internet Security Cameras support the MPEG4 and MJPEG standard, therefore providing a fluent audio and video quality. Moreover via the built-in microphone the user can hear what is happening in the monitored area. By placing the camera in for example the baby's bedroom, the user can listen to all the recorded sounds without the need for additional devices such as a baby phone.

The LN-406 guarantees a wired network connection with speeds up to 100 Mbps, whereas the WL-404 offers wireless speeds up to 54 Mbps and wired speeds up to 100 Mbps without any interruptions or a delay. The Wireless Internet Security Camera offers an extensive wireless range and therefore optimum flexibility, since the device does not have to be placed near the router. Furthermore the WL-404 is compatible with 802.11 b/g/n wireless networks.

The WL-404 Wireless Internet Security Camera is priced at AED 749/- and the LN-406 Wired Internet Security Camera at AED 599/-. Both are accompanied by Sitecom's 10 year warranty.
