Explained difference between Hacking and Cracking, how the negative view towards hacking can be changed, demonstrated live hacking to Mullana University Students.

Ankit Fadia, the ethical hacker, Computer Security Expert and cyber terrorism guru visited the MM University campus today and addressed students and Faculty of MM Institutions on “Computer Security Measures”. Ankit became a hero at the young age of 15 by authoring his book “Unofficial Guide to Ethical Hacking” and wrote a dozen of other books thereafter. Ankit, who was very excited about the session at MM University, said, “The way the ATMs and sites are being hacked these days, this session will enlighten students about Computer Security Systems and teach them how to protect their own network. They can further, through various courses, learn and become a professional systems protector to shield other systems from hacking too.”

The lecture arranged in the University Auditorium was attended by over thousands of students and faculty members from various institutions of MM University but largely from the institutions of MM University but largely from the MM Engineering College, MM Institute of Computer Technology & Business Management (MCA), MM Institute of Management who took keen interest in his talk and actively participated in the subsequent interaction which followed his talk. “Cyber Crimes take place commonly these days, we got to know so much about and the hackers and how simple measures can help us protect our systems” said Piyush Jain, a student doing Mechanical Engineering at Mullana University.

MM University who has also signed a MoU with Infosys recently is participating actively to provide world class environment to its students. “We want our students to have knowledge about the latest technologies available so that they are well equipped when they join jobs” said Mr. Tarsem Garg, Chancellor, MM University.
