Aug. 27, 2009 - PRLog -- Chrysler Group LLC announced that the 2010 Chrysler Sebring and the 2010 Dodge Avenger have earned the top safety rating pick from the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety (IIHS). Top level crash test performance plus electronic stability to keep drivers out of crashes are the tough criteria needed to earn this award. "The sought-after achievements highlight Chrysler's leadership in safety and security technology and occupant protection" said Scott Kunselman, Senior Vice President – Engineering, Chrysler Group LLC.

When it comes to safety and security, the 2010 Chrysler Sebring and the 2010 Dodge Avenger employ a two-fold approach: passive features, including pre-tensioning seat belt retractors and supplemental side-curtain airbags, are combined with accident-avoidance features, including responsive steering, braking, handling, and Electronic Stability Control (ESC).

The 2010 Chrysler Sebring and the 2010 Dodge Avenger offer more than 30 safety and security features. This includes ESC with traction control, Brake Assist and ABS, driver and front-passenger active head restraints, front seat-mounted side airbags and advanced multi-stage airbags. Both vehicles are also equipped with Lower Anchors and Tethers for Children (LATCH) for child safety seats.
