When it comes to musical ear training, learning to play hymns by ear on the piano just may be the way to go. You're about to learn why...

Learning to play hymns by ear is a rather satisfying way to approach learning piano, since the technical demand for playing most hymns is not at a high level. You will want to familiarize yourself with certain rudiments. Learning some basic chords on the piano is essential and the resource to go to is mentioned at the end of this post. There you will learn the fundamentals in a fashion that is not intimidating, and you'll have a lot of fun, too.

You can actually start to play hymns by ear once you have a few of these basic chords under your fingertips. For example, the very popular hymn "Amazing Grace" involves your just learning three major chords. Pianist Dave Longo, who can be contacted by going to the below link, says "The process of training the ear should be nothing less than a fun experience. You don't want to force your ears - you want to allow them to be receptive." Dave goes on to say, "That is why we refer to this journey as 'ear training' not 'ear straining' - keep it fun."

And, truly, Dave knows how to get you to do just that. Not only will you become equipped to play hymns by ear on the piano, you will learn a whole host of other great musical skills, including improvisation and more.

"Learning to play hymns by ear is a great start," says Dave. "It serves as a great way to ease into the process of playing music of all types. Aside from not being intimidating, it's quite satisfying because you get to see results rather quickly, especially under the right guidance."

"Coach Me!" is an online personal coaching program where Dave himself offers this kind of guidance. "I have a passion for working one-on-one with people," Dave offers with enthusiasm, "It's an incredible experience to see people realize potential they didn't originally know existed. I have a great time with this." When asked if people are able to learn to play hymns by ear using his coaching, he answered with an emphatic "Yes." You can get in touch with this piano coaching program by visiting the link below as well.
