Up to the minute information and airport updates are now available on the new Paulding County Regional Airport (KPUJ) website, www.pauldingairport.com.

Spectrum 24 Media is pleased to announce the release of the updated Paulding County Regional Airport (KPUJ) website, www.pauldingairport.com. The website originally went live in October of 2008, and, since then, significant improvements have taken place to the airport property and to the professionally-designed website that was created to highlight the unique planning and positioning of this new airport, located northwest of Atlanta. Spectrum 24 Media is also responsible for brochure designs and the branding package for the airport.

The Paulding County Regional Airport (KPUJ) is the first jet-capable airport to be built in Georgia in over thirty years, and its design provides a very solid foundation and infrastructure for the future of aviation and commerce in Paulding County. Named by the United States Department of Commerce as winner of the 2007 “Excellence for Innovation in Economic Development” award, the airport is the centerpiece of a 10,000 acre pod system designed to enhance commerce and industry. Additionally, the Nature Conservancy, a prominent national organization focused on conserving the environment and self-sustainable development, has endorsed the airport’s 600 acre design. The eco-friendly foresight that was adopted during the planning phases will ensure Paulding County Regional’s place on a very short list of “Green-Airports.”

The Paulding County Regional Airport maintains a focus upon supporting positive relationships with its neighbors in surrounding areas, and airport users will find that the facilities and lack of congestion will provide a positive flying experience each and every time. The ultimate goal of the airport is to provide long-term profit generation that can self-sustain the airport for development as it rewards stakeholders. The airport continues to seek federal and state funds to constantly improve facilities and to better serve its customers.
