

How Men Should Pick Engagement Rings

Oct. 13, 2009 - PRLog -- There comes a time in a relationship when a man realizes that the woman he is currently dating is the one. At this point, one can clearly envision a future where they love each other, live together, raise children, and grow old while holding hands. But how do you tell your wife-to-be that you want to be together? You already know the answer. When a man pulls out a small box with a ring inside it in front of a woman, he is expressing his willingness to be with her for the rest of his life.

Women, on the other hand, use engagement rings as a subtle sign to inform people that she is getting married. Subtlety is not much practiced today, though, as word often travels fast about the engagement. Still, an engagement ring is something nice to look at, and brides-to-be would more than happy to show their rings to their friends.

In a few countries, an emerging practice would be for the woman to also purchase an accompanying ring for her fiancé to wear. Some say that this is small but important step to achieve gender equality in relationships. Prior to this, only women wear engagement rings while men can go about their day without people knowing that he is about to be married.

How Men Pick the Rings

Unlike some women who have already seen how their weddings will be like while they are still seven, men only think about engagement when the moment dawns on them. They do not buy an engagement ring and then pull it to any woman they are currently going out with. However, when the right woman comes, they would start looking for the right engagement ring.

The selection and the succeeding purchase are often done in secret. In order to help men who are artistically challenged, jewelry stores have an entire section devoted to engagement rings with various designs. The basic structure would have a metal ring (usually gold or silver) topped by a precious stone. The choice for many men would always be diamond due to its strength and beauty. Diamonds also do not come cheap, and their value would greatly depend on the cut, carat weight, color, and clarity. There are other gemstones that can be considered.

Ultimately, men choose engagement rings based on what they think is the most beautiful or the most expensive that they can afford. Price or beauty aside, what matters most is that when the proposal comes, it is hoped that the woman should look at the ring and understand what it means, not look at the ring and wonder how much it costs.

The Proposal

Equally important to the engagement ring is the proposal itself. Most men take their girl to an elegant dinner and pop out the question right there. Others go as creative as they can, because hopefully, they will only do this once in their life. Several proposals have been done in public, especially sports games with not-so-good results. Others propose under the sea. For what its worth, the proposal and the engagement rings bring out the romantics in all of us. Now let us hope that the girl says yes.
