Infobarrel launches additional revenue sharing options with the introduction of Chitika ads.

Vancouver, BC - InfoBarrel.com, a leading revenue sharing writers community launches Chitika revenue share.

Since Infobarrel.com's inception, the site has offered writers the opportunity to generate a passive income stream via Google AdSense revenue sharing. Recently, Infobarrel.com has expanded its revenue sharing horizons and has begun offering a secondary source of income for writers. After weeks of research based on ad performance Infobarrel has implemented Chitika's ads on a 75% revenue share as is available with Google AdSense giving users a secondary stream of passive income from their already existing articles

We spoke with Kevin Hinton, head of development on Infobarrel.com and he said "After extensive testing we've found that showing Chitika ads to users who come to the site through search engine traffic should boost writers earnings substantially. We have tested numerous different ad positions and have found the current setup actually increases Google AdSense earnings and simultaneously creates a second income stream helping writers create even more money off their work. We are aware that many people are turning to Infobarrel to help them through the recession by giving them a work from home opportunity that they can do in their spare time. Adding Chitika to the mix was just one of the exciting new things we have up our sleeves for Infobarrel, pay attention in the coming months to watch as we push the envelope."

On top of the recent Chitika announcement, Infobarrel.com has been recently reached some other interesting milestones. Infobarrel recently received their 5000th writer as well as their 12,000th article.

Infobarrel.com launched on July 31st, 2008 and was one of the few sites dedicated to writers where people could create content and generate a passive income stream without having to have an internet marketing background. Over the last year Infobarrel.com has sky rocketed and has started to surface as competition for some of the giants in the industry such as HubPages and Squidoo.

Infobarrel.com plans to continue to be the best place for writers to start writing for money online by adding more revenue share options as well as developing a one of the biggest writers communities online.
