Entrepreneur, engineer, marketing consultant and coach Deon Reynders will be traveling all the way from Western Australia to attend the CarbonCopyPro Mastermind Event in Las Vegas on 19 November 2009.

Deon Reynders, CEO of Visionary Marketers, will be attending the CarbonCopyPRO Mastermind event in Las Vegas on 19 November. This major event is attended by marketers from 150 countries across the globe.

Reynders, an Engineering veteran with three Science/Engineering degrees and an MBA under his belt, is a data communications specialist with 38 years postgraduate experience. Over the past decade he has trained personnel in topics such as data communications, project management and financial management in countries such as the USA, Canada, Trinidad, the UK, Ireland, South Africa, Botswana, Australia, New Zealand, China, Myanmar, Singapore, Malaysia, Indonesia, Oman and Saudi Arabia.

Many of his friends envied his lifestyle, but it came at a price. "There is an old navy song that goes like this"; he says: "I joined the navy to see the world. But what did I see? I saw the sea! In my case it turned out to be aircraft interiors, airports and hotel rooms." Having breakfast in Singapore, lunch in London and supper in Toronto may seem glitzy, but it is hard work. However, the Internet brought about sweeping changes in the way things are being done, and training is no exception. More and more training is conducted live through the Internet, although this introduces new challenges such differing time zones.

A year ago Reynders actively embraced another passion of his, viz. online marketing, and created Visionary Marketers, a small company specializing in marketing consultancy services and training for small businesses and individuals. This was almost a natural progression for him because of his background.

"The Internet has become a great leveler of playing fields", he says. "You no longer need a million-dollar budget to start a business. You need not even leave the comfort of your own home. However, few people have the know-how to become successful online. Just as nobody can become a successful Engineer without training, time, money, experience and dedication, it is impossible to become a successful online marketer without experience, cash flow, sweat equity, and perseverance".

According to Reynders, selling through the Internet is a brilliant strategy, because sales figures for the past year show that it appears to be a recession-proof industry. "There is also no other industry where it is possibly for private individuals to generate 'CEO' incomes. However, this sort of income, attractive as it may sound, requires a massive amount of know-how", he says.

This is where CarbonCopyPRO enters the picture, Reynders explained. "CCPro is primarily an incubator for entrepreneurs, where aspiring marketers learn to market anything to anyone, anywhere, through direct online selling. It is, in my mind, the 'Rolls Royce' of training/marketing platforms. It is not cheap, and not for everyone. It is the equivalent of the Ferrari in the motoring world. It is, quite possibly, the razor's edge that separates the good from the great."
