

Winter Leads to More Auto Insurance Claims

Auto accidents happen all the time but especially in the winter when hazardous conditions often lead to serious collisions. You should know what to do after an accident in order to collect on your insurance.

Nov. 23, 2009 - PRLog -- Winter is a fun time for many snow activity enthusiasts. Skiing, snowball throwing, hockey playing, and snowmobile riding are just a few of the thrills that can only be enjoyed in the cold weather months of some regions. However, auto accidents, a not-so-welcome thrill, also are prevalent in the winter months and can be remedied if one knows how to file an auto insurance claim.

Icy roads, snow storms, and other factors contribute to the high number of auto accidents and subsequent auto accident claims in the winter months. Drivers should know exactly what to do and when to do it after a collision in order to ensure a successful auto insurance claim.

According to an article recently published on InsuranceAgents.com, drivers involved in a collision should immediately file a police report and contact their insurance agent to learn what steps they should take from there. Being honest and upfront and keeping an open line of communication with the insurance company are all crucial to filing a successful claim.

Also, drivers should know their local laws. Some regions require snow tires during the winter months and any driver who neglects this law could find that filing an auto insurance claim to be more difficult.
