

Why Right Now Is The Right Time For A Hawaii Adventure

This author cannot recall a time that Hawaii companies have been offering so many promotional offers, deals, specials and truly deep discounts. Even companies not publicly promoting discounts or savings are more willing than ever to cut a deal.

Dec. 24, 2009 - PRLog -- While Hawaii was initially less significantly impacted than other areas by the banking and housing meltdowns of late 2008 and 2009, as the past year unfolded the true economic impact on Hawaii became clearly evident. Over the course of 2009 the islands of aloha have seen the fewest visitors since 2003. The reduction in visitors coupled with the growth of the travel and vacation industries throughout the more prosperous times in the 90's and early 2000's, created near historical lows in accommodation occupancy levels and business in general.

The first benefit of the current state of Hawaii tourism is the simple fact that there are less people. Less visitors means less crowded beaches, accommodations, and attractions, accompanied by a consumer advantage in the marketplace, and an eagerness of competing business to earn the privilege of serving you which brings us to the second major benefit. This author cannot recall a time in the past ten years that Hawaii companies have been offering so many promotional offers, deals, specials and truly deep discounts. Even companies not publicly promoting discounts or savings are more willing than ever to cut a deal.

Below are just a few of the great deals and bargains being offered by airlines, hotels, hostels, tour operators, car rental companies, and entertainment establishments.
