1. A Solid Resume

In order to stand out from the crowd of aspiring game testers, it is critical that you create a strong resume that will truly showcase not only your passion for video games, but will also highlight why your prospective employer should hire you for the job.

You have to tell others how many games you've played, the ones you own and anything convincing to make them give you a testing job. The most convincing part of a resume is the next factor -- Good Experience. Experience counts.

2. Some Good Experience

Experience is very important to your game tester job applications. How to gain experience?

One of the ways is to become a great tester before you even fill out an video game tester application for the position of game beta tester. Just start paying attention to some of the more technical aspects of a game while you're playing it, pay attention to any glitches or bugs you seem to run across and exactly where you find them in a game.

Do not be afraid to ask your difficulties about the programming of a game or even giving valid suggestions. Begin to keep a log while playing games, this will slowly evolve you into the type of mind set necessary for a video game tester career.

3. The Right Knowledge of How and Where to Find Jobs

Video game testing is still a fairly small niche among the job field, so it is hard for prospective testers to find quality information.

The first places to check are websites of major game companies. Besides, gaming forums and forums for game testers are also a good idea to join. You can ask questions and get help from experienced game testers – and frequently these forums have sections for potential game testers. You can learn from people, as they can usually point you in the right direction.

Even though game developers need video game testers on a constant basis, most of them don't advertise it. So another good choice is to join some membership sites that can help you find jobs. But make sure before you join any sites or download any employment guides that you know exactly what you're getting. You could write letters to them and the site's owner should answer all your questions.

Gamer Testing Ground has a list of hundred of game companies that are looking to hire new person to fill the position.
