

Local Black Leaders Meet to Discuss a New Agenda

By Atlanta's Black Community

Dated: Mar 10, 2010

Young Black leaders are beginning to emerge within the African-American community...meeting to discuss a new agenda.

On March 27th, more than a dozen African-American social activists are expected to meet at the Landmark Diner—downtown Atlanta, GA. The meeting should be reminiscent of those which took place amongst community leaders during the city's past Civil Rights Movement, where the topic of discussion was the "black agenda."

The group, who is thus far calling itself the Chamber for the Restoration of Black Americans, is expected to begin formulating contemporary approaches to solving a variety of problems facing the African-American community. It is likely that the group's leader, Kirt Hale (seen below), will use this forum to push his Black Restoration agenda, an agenda aimed at modifying the behaviors of African-Americans through massive psychosocial campaigns.
