Oaklawn Hospital selects RPI Consultants to guide implementation of Lawson Financials, Procurement and Human Capital Management Suites

Oaklawn Hospital recently selected RPI Consultants as its partner of choice to implement Lawson Financials, Procurement and Human Capital Management Suites.

Justin Braun, a Principal at RPI, states “We are excited to work with Lawson and Oaklawn on this critical initiative, and look forward to earning their trust and partnership throughout this implementation and beyond.”

A unique and highly flexible implementation model enables RPI to offer very competitive services targeted around single facility acute care hospitals. “We’ve developed a Lawson implementation model that breaks away from the traditional norm of engaging consultants on a full time basis throughout the project lifecycle”, explains Mr. Braun. “This allows us to deliver superior value to our customers, by focusing our efforts where they’re needed, and setting clear expectations on how internal resource efficiency can be maximized as well. For example, we include items in scope that can be a significant burden to client resources, particularly one-time implementation tasks that do not necessarily correlate to end state responsibilities or ongoing operations, such as building master files. Documenting future state business processes, creating custom end-user training and taking ownership over conversion work are all part of our standard Lawson implementation methodology.”

He also credits the resources RPI has assembled to enable this type of delivery. “Ultimately, when a customer selects an implementation partner, they’re not just looking at the bottom line. They also want to understand that the resources working on the project can deliver to their satisfaction. RPI has built a team of veteran Lawson consultants with expertise not only in Lawson, but in healthcare best practices as well.”
