

New Product Release - A Form Filler

Ottawa, ON July 4th, 2010 – Rob Latour announced today the release of a new product, A Form Filler, a software program specially designed to fill in Windows forms as quickly as they appear on your screen.

July 4, 2010 - PRLog -- A Form Filler is a new product that focuses on automatically filling in Windows forms. That means you can now have: windows that delay your system start-up automatically dealt with, password prompts securely filled in and then OKed, pesky message boxes dismissed without you lifting a finger, and a series of windows - for example to open up a connection to another PC - automatically filled in.

A Form Filler is fully customizable to your needs and smarter than you might think. It distinguishes all sorts of windows, including windows that share the same window title, provides for encrypted storage of your key commands, as well as the option to password protect that information from being viewed and changed by others. Also it manages an unlimited number of windows allowing you to toggle monitoring for them on and off individually or all at once.

Fully compatible with Windows 7, Vista and XP, A Form Filler takes a just few minutes to learn - but that won't be much compared to the hours and hours of time you'll save in the years to come no longer needing to deal with annoying windows.

Release your inner geek! Give A Form Filler's free 30 day, fully functional, trial a go!

For additional information or to try out A Form Filler just visit <http://www.aformfiller.com> and download a copy of the program. A full licensed copy of A Form Filler sells for only $14.99.
