Aug. 24, 2010 - PRLog -- ATLANTA, GA- Aug 24, 2010–LIGATT Security International, a cyber security company, came to the decision earlier this year to hire McKenna Long & Aldridge LLP (MLA) to perform as the company’s Lobbyist. MLA’s main responsibility is to help LSI obtain local, state, federal, national as well as international government contracts.

Journalist Bill Torpy of the Atlanta Journal-Constitution recently wrote a feature article on McKenna Long & Aldridge. In the article, it states that when it comes to politics and government contracting, McKenna Long & Aldridge are the “go-to” law firm. The article also states, “People in the firm have relations in and knowledge of government,” said Clay Long, the 74-year-old lawyer on the firm’s nameplate. “Sometimes you have to know where to go and how to get in the door to allow you to make your case.”

“Every time I meet with them they have a team of attorneys that specialize in different parts of government whether it be local, state, or federal. As a small business owner I am honored that they respect the company enough to help guide us to another level,” says Gregory Evans of LIGATT Security International.

Gregory Evans, President and CEO of LIGATT Security International compares working with McKenna Long & Aldridge to working with basketball superstars Kobe Bryant and LeBron James. “If you want to win championships then you need to surround yourself around champs. We have hired the best in the business to assist LSI in gaining government contracts. McKenna Long & Aldridge are the Kobe Bryant and LeBron James of law firms,” states Evans.
